

Directory of National Regulatory Bodies For the Control of Radiation Sources

06-01-2026

FOREWORD

The establishment of an international regime for radiation safety and the control of radiation sources requires close cooperation and coordination between Member States, in terms of exchange of information, expertise, experience and knowledge.

To facilitate this exchange and assist Member States, the IAEA has developed a directory of national regulatory bodies responsible for the control of radiation sources. All States, through these bodies, are requested to verify the directory's accuracy and completeness.

Further information may be obtained from:

Regulatory Infrastructure and Transport Safety Section
